河南位于中国中东部、黄河中下游，因大部分地区位于黄河以南，故称河南；因位于中国腹地，又有“中原”“中州”之称。全省总面积16.7万平方公里，常住人口近1亿人。

Located in central-eastern China and the middle and lower reaches of the Yellow River, Henan gets its present name because most of its region lies south of the Yellow River; situated in the hinterland of China, Henan is also known as “Zhongyuan” (literally means “Central Plains”) or “Zhongzhou” (literally means “central region”). It covers a total area of 167,000 square kilometers, with a permanent population of nearly 100 million.

Henan is the vital birthplace of the Chinese nation and civilization, offering an immersive experience of China's history including the culture of the Spring and Autumn Period and the bricks and tiles made in the Qin and Han dynasties. In the long course of the 5,000-year Chinese civilization, Henan was the political, economic, and cultural center for over 3,000 years, with more than 20 dynasties having their capitals here. Four of the eight great ancient capitals in China, namely Luoyang, Kaifeng, Anyang, and Zhengzhou, are located in Henan. Moreover, the Four Great Inventions originated in Henan. There are five world heritage sites such as the Longmen Grottoes in Luoyang and the Yin Ruins in Anyang. The world-renowned Shaolin Kung Fu and Tai Chi are derived and spread to the world from Henan. Henan is an important cradle of Chinese surnames. Of the 300 popular surnames nowadays, 171 are rooted in Henan. 78 of the top 100 popular surnames with large population are originated in Henan.
